IT BEGAN WITH A SINGLE PRODUCT IDEA

...a pistol grip hacksaw purchased from a customer in lieu of payment of his account at the family hardware store in New York's East Village. Then President Louis Gringer designed a four-way keyhole saw called the All-Way Handy Saw due to its blade locking in four different positions. The name was so intimately associated with the company that the company, then the Ultra Manufacturing Company, renamed itself the Allway Manufacturing Company.

Donald Gringer came onboard in the 1950s, with an engineering degree and expertise in product design. He started inventing allied products for the worldwide distribution Allway enjoys today.

Ever since then, Allway Tools continues its tradition of technological innovation, high quality and meeting the ever-changing demand for value-added products from dealers, contractors and consumers.

We invent the tools you ask for by name.
